THE OLD CONSTITUTION.

To Be Forever Kept as a National Naval Museum.

Commodore Farragut's Flagship, the Hartford, is Also to Be Permanently Maintained—Relic of the Kearsarge.

[Special Washington Letter.]

"There is nothing in all my work of which I am more proud," said the secretary of the navy the other morning, "than the accomplishment of the reclamation of the old battleship Hartford. Congress is often very prodigal in allowing large appropriations for claims, but congress is not primarily patriotic or sentimental. It was very difficult to secure an appropriation, but, by constant urging, it was accomplished. And now Commodore Farragut's flagship will be permanently maintained in the navy."

"Do you know that a relic of heroism lingers in patriotism? The young men who see the Hartford in future years, and who read the splendid naval career, will be stimulated to honor the flag which floats over her, and have an ambition to do as well for their country as did the heroes who trod her decks and served her guns. They will read of the old commodore lashed to the mast and handling his fleet in the smoke and carnage of battle, and particularly our young midshipmen will have before them constantly the memory of the commodore, with a stimulated ambition to fight as he fought, if ever in command of a battle ship in time of war."

"Yes, I am glad that the Hartford is preserved; but I am not satisfied with the progress made towards a restoration and reclamation of the Constitution. That splendid relic of American prowess should be preserved. Although I have constantly asked congress to make an appropriation for that purpose, I have failed to receive a dollar, up to date."

Secretary Herbert is not alone in his desire to have the Constitution repaired. Congressman Fitzgerald, of Massachusetts, has secured the adoption of a resolution calling upon the secretary of the navy for an estimate of the amount of money which will be necessary to move the Constitution from Portsmouth to the Washington navy yard, where it is contemplated that the ship shall be forever kept as a naval museum. In support of his resolution, Mr. Fitzgerald made a speech in the house of representatives. He said:

"In connection with the resolution I present a petition of the Massachusetts Historical society that congress may take some action in regard to the preservation of the frigate Constitution, which now lies at the Portsmouth navy yard, and is in such a condition as to be in danger of sinking at any time."

"As every member of this house knows, there is no vessel in the American navy that possesses the history and the record that the Constitution possesses. It is my proud privilege to represent in congress the district in which is located the wharf where this famous old frigate was built and launched. In grateful memory of her untarnished record it has been called Constitution wharf. As a boy I have the pleasantest recollections of the happy days spent at the wharf where the Constitution was built over a century ago, and when I stand here pleading for the preservation of Old Ironsides my deepest sympathies are moved. The achievements of the heroic sons of Massachusetts with her have produced within my breast, as they must within the breast of every American citizen, feelings of deepest reverence for the historic ship."

"Why should it be necessary to call the attention of the government to its duty with regard to the preservation of the Constitution, whose great victory in the naval engagement with the Guerriere in the dark days of the war of

FARRAGUT'S FLAGSHIP HARTFORD

1812 brought hope and encouragement to our people and placed the United States among the first-class powers of the world?

"Why this shame of neglect toward a historic relic that typifies the heroism of our fathers and is an inspiration to succeeding generations?"

"Nelson's flagship, Victory, is carefully perpetuated by Great Britain, and in such great reverence is she held that Englishmen respectfully remove their hats whenever they pass. Who shall say that the dear old Constitution, with her unbroken line of victories, unparalleled in the history of the world, is not worthy of like respect from a grateful republic?"

"In 1829, when the destruction of the Constitution was ordered, the stirring lyric poem of Oliver Wendell Holmes saved her from what would have been a disgrace to our country, and I think it proper that those inspiring words should be recalled at this time, when, through neglect, a like fate seems to be in store for her."

OLD IRONSIDES.
Ay, tear her tattered ensign down!
Long has she waved on high,
And many an eye has danced to see
That banner in the sky.
Beneath it rang the battle shout,
And burst the cannon's roar;
The meteor of the ocean air
Shall sweep the clouds no more!

Her deck, once red with heroes' blood,
Where knelt the vanquished foe,
When winds were hurrying o'er the flood,
And waves were white below,
No more shall feel the victor's tread,
Or know the conquered knee:
The harpies of the shore shall pluck
The eagle of the sea!

Oh, better that her shattered hulk
Should sink beneath the wave;
Her thunders shook the mighty deep,
And there should be her grave;
Nail to the mast her holy flag,
Set every threadbare sail,
And give her to the god of storms,
The lightning and the rain!
"Massachusetts asks that this grand old ship be perpetuated, and she relinguishes her claim to have her place in the waters of the state, near where she was built and manned, that she may be placed in Washington, here to serve as a national monument of the triumphs of the American seamen during the war of 1812. Such has ever been the true, chivalrous spirit of Massachusetts, and "Through the care and labor of her own historical society she preserves the revered relics of the revolutionary times and of her illustrious sons; and she feels that she has the right to insist that the national government shall no longer be unmindful of its duty to the flower of the American navy, the Constitution."

THE CONSTITUTION.

At the conclusion of the congressman's speech he was given an ovation of applause such as seldom is given to the most gifted of orators. The resolution was passed without objection, and in a short time the old frigate which bore our banner aloft with honor and glory will be properly cared for. Meeting the congressmen on the evening of the delivery of his speech, and congratulating him on the success of his effort, he said: "I am no orator. I never made a good speech in my life. I was gratified with the passage of the resolution, but the applause did not turn my head. The representatives of the people of this country were not applauding me. They were patriotically applauding the stanch old frigate of which I spoke, and for whose preservation I was pleading. They were also applauding the grand poet and his poem. Had it not been for the lines of Holmes, the Constitution would have been torn to pieces as an old hulk, worn out, and no longer useful."

The gentleman is modest and sincere. Nevertheless, his speech was delivered with the eloquence of fervid earnestness. He is not an orator, and he is wise enough to know it. But his speech ought to pass into history with the splendid poem which he quoted. Oliver Wendell Holmes prevented the destruction of the Constitution. Congressman Fitzgerald secured the appropriation which will result in her permanent preservation.

It is a pity that the Kearsarge could not have been preserved. She was lost by careless seamanship on a reef in the Atlantic ocean. The gallant cruiser ought not to have been on duty. She should have been kept in the Washington navy yard forever. But our statesmen are shortsighted. The republic is young. Our people have not become accustomed to making sacred history for the future. They make history in the present, and fortunately it is intended to be patriotic history, and will read well through all generations; but they are reckless of the nice little details which go to make beautiful the history of nations.

But we have a relic of the Kearsarge which will be preserved carefully for all time. It is the oak rudder post of the historic cruiser. In the museum at the navy yard the rudder post stands. Imbedded in it is a conical shell which came near destroying the ship. It was fired from a rifle on a Confederate cruiser Alabama. But it did not explode. An explosion would have resulted in the sinking of the Kearsarge, and the escape of the Alabama. The shell was found there after the celebrated engagement. A skillful gunner, risking his life, and of course risking the safety of the vessel, sat astride the rudder post and drilled a hole into the shell until he came to the powder. Then he poured in water and saturated the explosive. After that, he drilled one end of the dangerous missile and took out of it the explosive materials. The rudder post was then mended and strengthened with steel bands, and the Kearsarge sailed away after other confederate privateers. Finally, the rudder post was taken out and a new one put in its place. The old rudder post, with its shell inclosed, is at the navy yard; and it is all that remains of the famous ship.

A Patriarch Among Parrots.
In Brooklyn there is a parrot which is undoubtedly 90 years of age, and perhaps older. The present owner has the genealogy of the bird, and it begins in 1806, when the parrot was brought from England, and it was then claimed that it was the mate of one owned by King George III. The parrot is noted for its dignity, and holds receptions in great style. It is accomplished, speaking portions of three languages; is very fastidious in its eating, and, like all parrots, obstinate enough to remain dumb just when everybody wants it to talk.

Where the Money Went.
The vicar of a rural parish who had waxed eloquent on the subject of foreign missions one Sunday was surprised on entering the village shop during the week to be greeted with marked coldness by the worthy dame who kept it. On seeking to know the cause, the good woman produced a coin from a drawer, and throwing it down before the vicar, exclaimed: "I marked that holy crown and put it in the plate last Sunday, and here it is back again in my shop. I knowed well them niggers never got the money."

HANNA WILL BE CHOSEN

The Chairman to Succeed Senator Sherman.

GOV. BUSHNELL ANNOUNCED IT.

The Desire of the People to Know the Truth Induced Him to Break Silence Sooner Than He Expected—The Chairman Only Smiled.

COLUMBUS, Feb. 22.—Governor Bushnell has given out the following statement to the press:

"It had been my intention to make no announcement in relation to the action I would take in the matter of an appointment to fill the prospective vacancy in the Ohio representation in the United States senate until the vacancy actually existed. But on account of the manifest interest of the people and their desire to know what will be done, I deem it best now to make the following statement:

"When Senator Sherman resigns to enter the cabinet of President McKinley, I will appoint to succeed him Hon. Marcus A. Hanna of Cuyahoga county to serve until his successor is chosen by the seventy-third general assembly of the state. I trust this action will meet with the approval of the people."

"ASA S. BUSHNELL."
CLEVELAND, Feb. 22.—Chairman Hanna was at the Union club when he was shown the dispatch from Columbus containing Governor Bushnell's announcement of Mr. Hanna's appointment as senator to succeed Mr. Sherman. This was the first information.

MARCUS A. HANNA.

Mr. Hanna had on the subject. Of course he was pleased at the termination of the controversy, but he showed his pleasure only by a genial smile. When asked if he would discuss the governor's action the chairman declined to say anything, remarking that he would not talk about the matter for publication until he had received official notification of his appointment from Governor Bushnell. Mr. Hanna received at the club the congratulations of such of his friends as had heard of his appointment.

REFORM PRESS MEETINGS.

A Belief That the Two Bodies Will Arrange Their Differences.

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 22.—The conference of the National Reform Press association, called by Chairman Arthur Roselle of the Missouri state People's party committee, and also secretary and treasurer of the National association, is meeting here today.

Chairman Roselle said that they would proceed with their business without reference to the Memphis gathering, which would be entirely ignored. "We are in the right," said he, "and any overtures for peace must come from the Memphis people."

Apparently such overtures are expected, Mr. Roselle giving the substance of a message he had received from Senator William A. Allen of Washington, in which the latter counseled holding open the Kansas City meeting for a day or two after the Memphis meeting. MEMPHIS, Feb. 22.—The Reform Press association convened here this morning, being called to order by General Paul Vandervoort, president of the association. President Vandervoort is opposed to the idea of any sort. He said the Democratic party absorbed the Greenbackers by adopting their principles, and he said the same thing a few years later when the National Union Labor party was organized. He declared the middle-class policy will revive their power. There is a threat to bolt if there is any attempt to read Senator Butler out of the party.

SOLDIERS GUARD A PRISON.

Friends of Condemned Assassins Threaten to Dynamite a New Mexico Pen.

SANTA FE, Feb. 22.—Governor Thornton has placed the local company of infantry on guard at the penitentiary on account of the discovery of a plot to blow up the building by a party of friends of the four members of the Borrego gang of assassins, who were condemned to be hanged next Tuesday, but have been granted a respite for 30 days by President Cleveland.

Another ominous feature of the trouble is the appearance of the cabalistic chalk figures "H-30-2" on the pavement of any sort. He said the Democratic party absorbed the Greenbackers by adopting their principles, and he said the same thing a few years later when the National Union Labor party was organized. He declared the middle-class policy will revive their power. There is a threat to bolt if there is any attempt to read Senator Butler out of the party.

Lindsay Served an Unjust Term.

MIDDLETOWN, Feb. 22.—Joseph Mordock, of Scott county, Va., who was supposed to have been murdered 25 years ago, and for which crime Bud Lindsay served 21 years in the Virginia penitentiary, has returned to his former home. Lindsay died recently.

Expressed Sympathy for Greece.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—A resolution by Mr. Cameron of Pennsylvania was unanimously adopted in the senate Saturday expressing sympathy with Greece in the present continental conflict.

AN ANGEL OF THE SLUMS.

A Wealthy Woman Devotes Her Life and Fortune to the Poor.

One of the best known "angels" of the New York slums is Mrs. Sarah J. Bird, a wealthy widow of Montclair, N. J. For many years she has been interested in the work, and when her husband was alive the two spent a good deal of time on the Bowery, doing much for the cause of humanity. When she was left alone, six years ago, she determined to devote even more of her time to helping the unfortunate of the great city. In fashionable Montclair she had been a good deal of a social leader, but she regretted the time spent at society functions, and after awhile made up her mind to abandon them all.

So she rented a few small rooms in Eldridge street, in the center of the most squalid and wicked portion of New York's east side, and moved in among the people whose welfare she had at heart. Her big country house at Montclair she visits occasionally, but most of the time it is shut up and in the care of servants. Her Eldridge street rooms she calls her slum quarters. They are simply furnished, but they serve her purpose, and that is to bring her near the people who need her help.

It is a very practical sort of help that she gives them. She helps them to help themselves. She teaches mothers how to sew and make their own dresses, how to properly prepare cheap but wholesome dishes and how to keep their tiny tenements clean and well ventilated. She looks after the children, sees that they are sent to school, provides clothing for them when necessary and brings medicine when they are sick.

Besides this she has a regular programme for several days in the week. One day she devotes to visiting the cheap lodging houses, which shelter more of the unfortunate than the criminal class. She holds mission meetings for these men and never neglects to give them a good meal first. She visits the Tombs, too, and recently treated the women prisoners there to pink tea, which was greatly appreciated. She supervises a kindergarten which she has established on the Bowery, and it is there that many little street waifs get their first glimpse of the sunshine of human kindness.

These many duties keep Mrs. Bird very busy, and when she has nothing to do on hand she makes house to house visits. Hundreds know her and her good works, and the little children of the slums shout with delight when they see her coming.

THE MAD MUNKACSY.

Romantic Career of the Unfortunate Hungarian Painter.

Many of the greatest and most notable canvases of Michael Munkacsy, the famous Hungarian artist who was recently taken to a French madhouse, are owned in this country. General Alger of Michigan owns "Kittens," for which he paid $5,000; the late Miss Katherine Wolfe bought "Condemned Death," which made the painter's fame international at a single bound, and John Wanamaker gave $100,000 for "Christ Before Pilate," which is Munkacsy's best advertised if not his finest work.

He has been a wonderful career. Born of most humble parents, he was apprenticed to a carpenter when a mere boy. His youthful ambition was to become a tailor, but by mere chance he was set to decorating clothes closets by his master, and his skill with the brush soon won him local fame. A band of strolling artists who saw his work gave him a new ambition, and he started out to become an artist.

After several years of hard work he set up a humble studio in Dusseldorf, painting pictures for just enough to give him a bare living. One day an American tourist strolled into his studio and discovered him at work on the picture of a Hungarian soldier who had been condemned to be shot and was spending his last hours in a guarded hut, surrounded by curious neighbors. The American offered him a price many times larger than he had ever dreamed of getting, and he accepted it greedily. But his generous patron, when he saw the finished picture, made him send it to the Paris salon. It created a sensation. Miss Wolfe offered $6,000 for it, and the original purchaser kindly waived his right.

From that moment Munkacsy's reputation was made, and all his later works were sold at almost fabulous prices. In 1878 he met the Baroness de Marches, and they fell in love with each other at sight. Soon after this her aged husband died, and a year later the baroness and the painter were married with great ceremony. The Austrian government conferred upon him the Iron Cross as a wedding present, and subsequently the Austrian emperor created him Baron de Munkacsy.

The fortunate artist removed to Paris, where for years he occupied a splendid palace filled with costly bric-a-brac and gems of art. A few months ago came the news that Munkacsy was seriously ill, and it developed that he had lost his mind and had been taken to an insane asylum.

THE CHANGE OF LIFE.

INTELLIGENT WOMEN PREPARE FOR THE TRYING ORDEAL.

A Time When Women Are Susceptible to Many Dread Diseases.

The anxiety felt by women as the "change of life" draws near, is not without reason.

When her system is in a deranged condition, or she is predisposed to apoplexy, or congestion of any organ, it is at this period likely to become active and with a host of nervous irritations, make life a burden.

Such warning symptoms as a sense of suffocation, headache, dizziness, etc., are impending evil, and should be met before the eyes, irritability, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and incontinence, dizziness, etc., are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life where woman's great change may be expected. Thousands at this critical time consult Mrs. Pinkham, and conduct their habits according to her advice, and with the Vegetable Compound go through that distressing time with perfect safety and comfort. Mrs. W. L. Day, of Bettisville, Ohio, says:—

"When all else failed, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved my life. It carried me through the change of life all right, and I am now in good health. It also cured my husband of kidney trouble."
